

To insure realism, passing cards for second string quarterbacks who threw less than 100 passes were adjusted according to their past records or reduced below the records achieved by their teams' first string quarterbacks. To further insure realism, certain substitute running backs' yards per carry average were reduced by their longest runs. We suggest that you throw few or no short or long passes to potential receivers who do not have any listing (completed pass caught) for that type of pass on their receiving cards.

Below is a listing containing the number of times each team ran or passed. Included in passing attempts are the total number of times quarterbacks were tackled attempting to pass. This is a helpful guide in determining your offensive plays.

Below is a coupon containing prices of miscellaneous Strat-O-Matic Football Items. All are self-explanatory with the exception of the 15 nameless player cards. Nameless Player Cards are nameless cards fully computed and statistically setup. You will therefore be in a position to create cards for rookies and veterans not included on your team rosters. This is accomplished by designating a nameless card to be the equivalent in ability to an individual rookie playing a major role in the 1970 season.

ADDITIONAL SUGGESTED RULE:

In regards to long gains on runs, we suggest that a player may not exceed his longest rush on any long gain result with one exception: if a player's longest rush was a touchdown of 30 yards or more, he may exceed his longest rush. A player's longest rush followed by a star (found at the bottom of a player's running card) indicates a touchdown run. This rule applies to long gain run results only. For example, if the results of a running play is a long gain of 75 yards and the runner in question has a longest rush of 50 yards only, his run would be 50 yards. If his longest rush was 50 followed by a star, his run would be 75 yards.
